April 10th	36	12mo ... 1st ...		489	Printed	0 4 0	Upendra Krishna Gupta.	A Bengali gentleman leaves home for service at a distant place, entrusting the management of his family and the nursing of his aged parents to his young wife by a second marriage. The latter, in her anxiety to save money for herself and her own parents, subjects her father-in-law and mother-in-law to serious privations in respect of food and other necessities, and thereby endangers their lives. The object of the author is to warn his countrymen against the folly and danger of marrying a second wife, after the death of the first, inasmuch as second wives are generally found to play the role of absolute despots in their families in defiance of all who are above them in rank.	2036

This work contains a very circumstantial account of her birth and exploits. It is stated in the preface that a person of the name of Náráyan Deb compiled the Padma Puran long ago from several mythological works. It was, however, seriously injured in the course of time by ignorant and unscrupulous copyists, and the present is a revised edition of it, prepared with the view of giving a permanent shape to the story of Padmábatí, which is exceedingly popular in Eastern Bengal.	2236

Mar., 20th	11	8vo.	...1st ...	200	ditto	0 2 0	J. O. B. Saunders, 9, Hare Street, Calcutta.	The author, who calls himself Britannicus, says that the policy of ruling India for the Indians is a false, mischievous, and sentimental policy, which, if persevered in, will be disastrous to the British Empire in India. The pamphlet is specially directed against Mr. Ilbert's Bill.	420
June, 2nd	135	Foolscap	1st ...	2,000	ditto	2 0 0	Rev. H. Fisher Corbyn, Abbotabad.	Discusses the Government policy of religious neutrality in this country; argues that that policy has been departed from in the Education Despatch of 1854, purposes by the Bishop of Lahore; and condemns the local self-government scheme of Lord Ripon as premature.	421
May, 18th	80	8vo.	...1st ...	2,000	Printed	Pratáp Chandra Ráya, 367, Chitpur Road, Calcutta.	A translation of the Mahábhárat into English prose is commenced in this volume. "The endeavour of the present translator has been to give as literal a rendering as possible of the great work of Vyása."	422
„ 14th	18	Foolscap.	1st ...	400	ditto	0 8 0	Rev. H. F. Corbyn, Abbotabad.	The author argues that it is no part of the duty of a Government to teach morality to its subjects, as is being done in the Punjab by the adoption of a class-book on morals which has been prepared by the Bishop of Lahore under the auspices of the Punjab University, and that it is inconsistent with the true principles of Christianity to construct a system of morality upon the basis of pure theism, as the Bishop of Lahore is doing. The pamphlet consists of letters written by its author and the Bishop.	423
April, 20th	8	8vo.	1st ...	2,000	ditto	...	Calcutta Tract and Book Society, 23, Chauringhi Road, Calcutta.	Says and adduces evidence to show that the great Bengali reformer believed in the divinity and divine mission of Christ, and affirms "that they only are the true followers of Rajah Ram Mohun Roy, walk in the way he pointed out and follow the teaching of his life, who receive the Bible in its fullness, Christ as their saviour, and become true Christians."	424

1883.	Pages.					Rs. A. P.
May 12th	16	8vo. ...	1st ...	300	Printed	0 4 0	Basanta Kumār Datta, Calcutta.	Contains an article, which will be continued, in which the writer argues that whatever the true principle of governmental action may be in this country in the matter of religion, it cannot be denied that, where the question is one which affects the life and death of its subjects, the Government of India cannot restrict its patronage to one particular system of medical treatment to the exclusion of others.	825

„ 4th	31	8vo. ...	1st ...	1,500	ditto ...	0 8 0	Tarak Nāth Biswas, Bagbazar, Calcutta.	The writer of one of the articles in this number says that true virtue resides not in pompous ritualism nor in solitary religious meditation, but in earthly life rendered pure and peaceful by self-restraint and charity.	827
Mar., 1st	64	8vo. ...	1st ...	500	ditto ...	1 2 0	Jnānābharan Mukharji, Konna-gar.	One writer points out to his countrymen the necessity of their being highly ambitious for the sake of securing worldly prosperity, and another writer describes wealth or riches as something that is very useful, though not very noble, in a spiritual point of view.	828
May, 13th	40	4to. ...	1st ...	1,000	ditto ...	0 12 0	Ramprasād Tāluk-dār, Tahirpur, Rajshabye.	This periodical will deal with current political questions, and subjects of practical interest, such as trade, agriculture, domestic economy, &c.	829

May, 12th	16	8vo dy.	1st ...	250	ditto ...	0 2 0	Rāmehandra Rāya of Serampore.	One writer says that the progress of Bengali literature, though wonderful compared with what it was 20 years ago, is not quite satisfactory. It would have been much greater if the quantity of worthless writing in the country had not been so very large.	837
Mar., 2nd	48	8vo rl...	1st	ditto ...	0 4 6	A new novel entitled Debi Chaudhurāni , written probably by Babu Bankim Chandra Chatterji, is commenced in this number. A brief paper on Rajah Sitāb Roy and a critique on Kālidās's Meghaduta are found in this number. One writer argues that, as there is no real death in this world, a future state of existence for man is a certainty, and another writer endeavours to make out that, according to ancient Hindus, fire, air, earth, water, and the sky were not five elemental substances, but five states or conditions of matter.	838

demned from the truly native point of view. The theory of Hindu marriage is explained, and the meaning of the Hindu marriage ritual is said to be to convert the Hindu woman into a superhuman or divine being. The Hindu conception of a wife is accordingly considered to be infinitely superior to the English conception of a wife.

1883.	Pages.					Rs. A. P.
May, 24th	16	8vo	... 1st ...	300	Printed	0 2 0	A new periodical which will be conducted in a patriotic spirit. Among other papers, there are in this number a poem in which the present condition of India is bewailed as exceedingly deplorable in comparison with its condition in ancient times, and a paper in which the insanitary atur or confinement room is stated to be one of the chief causes of the physical debility of Bengal's.	852
" 2nd	64	8vo	dy. 1st ...	500	ditto	0 8 0	Dwáráká Náth Bi-dyábhushan, Chángripotá.	One of the writers in this number says that the present deplorable condition of India is owing to an excessive development of spiritual life among ancient Hindus. The writer condemns the Brahmos for repeating the mistake which was committed in ancient India by attending far too much to spiritual and far too little to material concerns. The translation of Manu and the Sankhya Darsan is continued.	853
April, 28th	32	8vo	... 1st ...	1,000	ditto	0 4 0	Haridás Banerji, 53, Kalutolá Street, Calcutta.	One writer thinks that the true causes of the present poverty of India lies, not in the decline of Indian commerce, but in the decline of the Indian manufactures and manual arts. Great stress is laid upon India's increasing demand for iron works. Instruction in iron works is believed to be more urgently needed by the people of this country than the sort of instruction which is given in the colleges of Bengal.	854
May, 18th	64	8vo	... 1st ...	1,000	ditto	0 4 0	Haridás Banerji, 18, Nilmádhav Sen's Lane, Calcutta.	Contains an interesting article on Indian wheat and the prospects of the Indian wheat trade. The present tariff policy of the Government of India is believed to stand in the way of the development of that trade.	855

SUBORDINATE EXECUTIVE SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

APPOINTMENT DEPARTMENT.

Darjeeling, the 20th June 1883.

RESOLUTION.

READ—

Resolution of this Government, dated the 23rd February 1883, prescribing the conditions upon which appointments will in future be made to the Subordinate Executive Service in these Provinces.

IN paragraph 7 of the Resolution cited above, it has been ruled that candidates who will be permitted to appear at the open competitive examinations for admission into the Subordinate Executive Service must not be more than 25 years of age. The question having been raised whether this restriction of age applies equally to persons who are already in the Government service, the Lieutenant-Governor directs that, at the examination to be held in January 1884, the limit of age shall not be enforced against persons now in Government service, who will be allowed to compete, viz. the officers in the first and second grades of Sub-Deputy Collectors, or against those candidates whose names are included in the Government list. For the subsequent examinations the 25 years' rule will be strictly enforced in regard to all candidates, whether in Government service or not.

2. It will thus hereafter be open to persons already in Government employ to obtain appointments as Deputy Magistrates and Deputy Collectors, firstly, in open competition, they being, at the time they compete, not more than 25 years of age; and secondly, by special selection by Government for special reasons, or under exceptional circumstances, as laid down in paragraph 9 of the Resolution of the 23rd February last.

ORDER.—Ordered that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to all Commissioners of Divisions for information, and for communication to all District Officers in their Divisions.

Ordered also that the Resolution be published in the Calcutta Gazette.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

F. B. PEACOCK,

Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

REPORT OF THE HEALTH OFFICER OF CALCUTTA FOR THE YEAR 1882.

Dated Calcutta, the 14th April 1883.

From—The Health Officer of Calcutta,
To—The Chairman of the Corporation.

I HAVE the honour to submit the annual report and returns for the year 1882.

2. In accordance with the provisions of Act I (B.C.) of 1882, annual reports will for the future be prepared for the official year (ending 31st March) in place of the calendar year, as heretofore. It is therefore necessary that this report should embrace a period of 15 months (commencing 1st January 1882, and ending 31st March 1883). In order to maintain continuity of record, and facilitate comparison with the past, the report will mainly concern the calendar year 1882, and all comparisons with preceding years will refer to corresponding periods. The statistics of the three months January, February, and March 1883, will be inserted as a supplement, and the narrative of the sanitary state of Calcutta brought up to 31st March 1883. Future reports will embrace the official year, and the statistics of previous years will be recast, so as to obviate the hiatus which would result from a comparison of calendar and official years. This is not a point of much importance perhaps, but it is thought better not to allow the statistics of the first quarter of 1883 to drop out of the series.

3. Meteorology.—There is nothing worthy of note in the meteorology of the year. It may be pronounced normal. The barometric tide, as indicated by monthly means, was in accordance with rule, and very slight difference of level is observable in either monthly or annual means. The temperature of the year was, on the whole, little higher than usual, making allowance for the lower readings now obtained at the Alipore Observatory, as compared with the observations previously recorded in the Surveyor-General's office at Park Street. The difference will, however, become less appreciable as the results of preceding years come to comprise an increasing number of Alipore observations. A larger than average depression is observable in the results for February, May, and October. In the remaining months the readings correspond more closely with the annual mean. January and March present, however, relatively high figures. The mean range of temperature followed a normal curve. The humidity of the year was high: that of October and November being conspicuously so.

4. The rainfall of the year fell short by but two-tenths of an inch of the mean fall of the preceding 48 years. The distribution of the fall departed in some respects from the fall of former years, February and October receiving an undue share of the total, and June, July, and August less than the wonted amount. No meteorological disturbance of note visited Calcutta, unless the violent thunder-storms of February and October are entitled to that distinction. They were, however, but somewhat severe manifestations of phenomena always liable to occur at these seasons. The following table sets forth the various data above commented upon in detail:—

5. Since the close of the year the weather has been characterized by an unusually low temperature in January and February, and a heavier than usual fall of rain in February: this took place on the 25th and 26th of the month. Rain also fell in smaller quantities, almost daily, from 5th to 11th March, and was accompanied by considerable atmospheric disturbance. The humidity of March was rather high. In other respects the meteorology of the first quarter of 1883 was normal.

6. Price of Food.—The cost of food has been moderate throughout the year. Good balam rice sold at Rs. 2-9, coarse balam at Rs. 2-3, khari at Rs. 2-1, and deshi at Re. 1-14. These prices entitle the year to rank as a year of plenty. A reference to the table published in the report for 1880 indicates that the year 1882 is the third year of moderate prices following a period of six years of comparative dearth. Table No. XXII in the appendix shows that the prices of meat and other articles sold in the municipal market have been comparatively low, and table No. XX, which is a return of animals killed for food in the municipal slaughter-house at Tengra, exhibits an excess of 6,887 head of cattle of sorts as compared with the preceding year. The excess is contributed by every species of kill, excepting kids. The excess under the head of "second class bullocks" and sheep is very marked. Prices of food have continued moderate up to the close of the first quarter of 1883.

7. Markets.—The markets of the town have been under systematic inspection by the officers of this department during the year, with, on the whole, satisfactory results. Improvements have been made, at the instance of this office, in the sanitary condition of the following markets:—

NAME AND LOCALITY.	Proprietor.	Improvements effected.
Bowbazar, registered.
No. 84, Bowbazar Street	Nundogopal Muttylall	Part of the flooring repaired, as also the roads and drains.
Pork Market, licensed.
No. 23, Chattawalla Gully	Ranee Wooma Soondery Dossee ...	Thoroughly re-built on improved plan, with a pucca shed of 60 feet in length, with brick-on-edge road round pucca drains; drainage works, and water connections.
Dewan Kassy Nauth's Bazar, licensed.
No. 58, Clive Street	Damoodor Dass Burmon	Part of the shed on the west re-built and made pucca, with drains and roads round it; as also partial repairs made to other roads and drains.
Chandney Bazar, licensed.
No. 167, Dhurramtolla Street	Receiver, High Court	A good portion of the roads made pucca and cemented, as also the drains, with drainage connections.
Manicktolla Bazar, registered.
No. 101, Upper Circular Road	Ranee Kristoramoney Dossee	Sheds repaired, as also flooring; road widened to four feet, drains repaired and cemented; two urinals and a privy of four seats are also made for this bazar.
Notoon Bazar, registered.
No. 356, Chitpore Road	Rajah Rajendra Mullick	Roads, drains, and flooring repaired and put in proper order.
Lalla Baboo's Bazar, registered.
No. 372, Chitpore Road	Coomar Indra Narain Sing	Many of the roads and drains in this market are improved and thoroughly put in order; flooring and some portion of the sheds are repaired.
Annanth Nath Deb's Bazar, licensed.
No. 159, Manicktolla Street	Annanth Deb	Newly constructed and nearly completed, with proper roads, drains, privy, and water connections.
New Bazar.
Nos. 156 to 158, Bowbazar Street	Norendra Coomar Dutt	Ditto ditto.

Considerable opposition was experienced in inducing the proprietor of the registered market at 101, Upper Circular Road, to put the place in order and restore the paths to the width originally sanctioned, serious encroachments on them having intermediately been made by vendors with consent of the manager. After long discussions a compromise was effected, and the paths widened from three to four feet. It has now become the practice for the market committee to inspect all markets before giving the annual license. Opportunity is thus afforded for procuring the execution of all repairs and alterations which are considered conducive to public convenience and health.

8. Birth Registration.—The number of births registered during the year was slightly in excess of 1881, and 1,098 over the mean of the preceding decennium. The rate, 17.3, is exceeded by only one year of that series, namely 1880. The improvement in birth registration, which commenced in 1875, has been sustained, but, for the reasons stated fully in last year's report, there can be little or no doubt that a considerable number of births in Calcutta still escape registration. The statistics of 1882 agree with those of previous years in showing an excess of births in the last quarter of the year:—

1883	642	592	618	17.

The returns of the first quarter of 1883 present results corresponding closely with recent years.

9. Births according to Race.—For reasons fully set forth in last report, statistics relating to non-Asiatics and mixed races are subject to very great doubt. The census basis and the registered events are both liable to error; and as these data are recorded in a different manner, and by a different agency, it is more than probable that the kind and amount of error in them are also different. The remaining racial divisions shown in the following abstract and table (No. III) are less subject to error, both as regards numeration and registration:—

NATIONALITY.		Birth-rates.		Proportion of male to female births.
		1882.	1881.	1882.	1881.
Asiatics ...	Non-Asiatics ...	16.3	12.1	102	140
	Mixed races ...	42.7	50	109	119
	Hindoos ...	18.3	18	108	107
	Mahomedans ...	13.9	14.2	121	115
	Other classes ...	6.3	5.2	84	58

Mixed races, as usual, exhibit the greatest fecundity, and the proportion of male and female births is more normal. Non-Asiatics present a higher birth-rate than in 1881, and a normal sex proportion. Hindus are more prolific than Mahomedans, and show a more regular ratio of sexes in their births. The statistics relating to other classes—Native Christians, Armenians, Turks, Chinese, Syrians, Brahmos, Buddhists, Jains, Jews, Parsees, Sikhs, Dhangers, &c., are altogether anomalous.

Table No. III presents the registered births of the year, sub-divided according to race and sex, in detail.

10. Plural Births.—Thirty-five twin births were registered during the year: 38 of the children were males and 32 females. In 13 instances both children were males, in 10 both females, and in 12 one of each sex.

These figures correspond with those of previous years, and exhibit the same remarkable preponderance of males. I have searched sundry statistical reports for parallel data, and found in the excellent registration reports of the State of Michigan, figures which are compared with the results recorded in Calcutta during the last three years in the following statement:—

	Twin births per 1,000 of population.	PER CENT. OF TOTAL BIRTHS.			PER CENT. OF TOTAL INFANTS.
		Both males.	Both females.	One male and one female.	Males.	Females.
Calcutta, three years ...	98	39.6	26.7	33.6	56.4	43
Michigan, five years ...	29	29.9	31.6	38.3	49.2	50.8

This is a very special item of vital statistics, and not, it may reasonably be urged, so liable to error, either of omission or commission, as a more general entry. Still it is curious to observe how greatly the results differ in all respects—in respect of the number of these occurrences and of the sex of the children. The repetition of nearly similar proportions year after year gives presumption of accuracy in each case. If the discrepancy in a special point, such as this, is due to annually repeated error, the prospect of obtaining correct statistics seems almost hopeless. If, on the other hand, the figures in each case are sound, they indicate profound differences in the vital circumstances of different communities, which should temper hasty assumptions of inaccuracy when results, in different places or at different times, are found to disagree.

11. Mortality.—The death-rate of the year must be pronounced excessive. Only three years in the preceding decade present higher aggregates, and the rate is also in excess of the decennial mean. Cholera is the main cause of increase; “other causes,” though rendering fewer deaths than in 1851, present a striking contrast with the average. Under other heads, as shown in table No. IV, the results of the year are satisfactory, more particularly as regards small-pox. The mortality of the first quarter of 1883 has also been somewhat in excess of the preceding decennium, the excess being due to an increase of deaths from cholera, bowel-complaints, and other causes.

12. Mortality according to Locality.—The varying death-rates of different sections of the town have been illustrated and commented upon in previous reports. The feature is also evident in the figures of 1882; but, as compared with the preceding decennium, there is a greater tendency to equalization than usual, the habitually low showing higher rates, and the habitually high somewhat lower. In addition to the circumstances tabulated in previous reports, which tend to explain the high rates of the more unhealthy sections, I have added in table No. V a column showing the extent of area covered by bustees in each ward. The higher death-rates correspond generally with the more extensive bustee area, thus affording statistical evidence of the great insalubrity of bustees, and the extent to which their presence in a ward comprises its health.

13. Mortality according to Race.—Deaths are shown according to race in the detailed tables appended to this report. In the following abstract the aggregates are shown for the different races, sub-divided according to sex. Excluding "other classes," whose vital statistics are anomalous, the very high death-rate of mixed races, and the low death-rate of non-Asiatics, arrests attention. The data on which these rates are founded are, however, very doubtful. The death-rates of females are lower than of males in both classes. Hindus, as usual, present a higher rate than Mahomedans, and in the case of both the mortality of females exceeds that of males. The mortality of Mahomedan females is, as in former years, remarkably large.

14. In Table No. VII the facts as regards race and sex are stated in mensural detail, and arranged under the principal causes of mortality; reference will be made to this statement in discussing the special causes of mortality. As regards the totals, it will be observed that the month of December furnishes the highest, and the month of July the lowest aggregate of deaths, and that there is a tendency to fall and rise between these extremes. The tendency to fall is, however, disturbed by a very marked rise in April and May. A hot weather rise of the death-rate is a normal event, but that of 1882 was rather more marked than usual. The rains are the healthiest season of the year in Calcutta, because the two main causes of mortality, fever and cholera, are at a minimum during that time.

15. Deaths according to age.—The figures exhibited in Table No. VIII agree very closely with those of the previous year. In the last report a comparison was made between Calcutta and London in respect of the composition of its inhabitants as regards age and the death-rate at different periods of life. The data of the present year sustain the conclusion therein stated. It will be observed that the death-rate of person above 60 is higher than in the preceding year, and considerably above the London rate for this period of life (94·7 against 82·7). As the census returns do not furnish information regarding the numbers living at different ages of non-Asiatics and mixed races, their death-rates cannot be separately computed according to age.

16. Infant mortality.—The death-rates of infants under one year of age do not exhibit any abatement, and the infant mortality among different races presents similar contrasts. Mahomedans give the highest rates; Hindus come next; Christians follow at a considerably lower level; and “other classes” render rates comparing favourably with English rates. The main causes of infant mortality are shown in Table No. IX, from which it appears that convulsive diseases are the principal factors of the large loss of infant life among natives, and that these diseases tend rather to rise than fall. Probably a more accurate diagnosis has been made within recent years since attention was prominently directed to the subject.

17. A more minute analysis is made of infant deaths in table No. X, which also shows the sectional mortality as compared with the number of children under one year of age assigned to each ward by the census enumeration of 1881. The number of deaths occurring with 15 days of birth is again very striking, amounting to more than a half of the whole. The deaths of male children are as 122 to 100 female. The proportion in the census return is 109 to 100, and in the births of the year 111 to 100. Male infants, therefore, die in excess as compared with females, if these figures are to be trusted. In this respect the result agree with those of preceding years, and with the experience of Europe and America.

18. Suburban mortality.—The death-rate of the suburbs, though still greatly in advance of that of the town, presents an improvement as contrasted with the last few years, as is shown in the following statement :—

YEAR.	TOWN.		SUBURBS.
	Actual number of deaths.	Per 1,000 of population.	Actual number of deaths.	Per 1,000 of population.
1877	13,704	31.6	14,025	55.7

1882	13,177	30.4	10,470	41.6

The abatement in the suburban mortality, as compared with that of the previous year, is due to a decline of deaths from fevers, bowel-complaints, and "other causes," small-pox showing a slight rise, and cholera a considerable advance. Table No. XI presents the figures of the year in monthly detail, and under certain main causes similar to those exhibited for the town in table No. VII.

19. Cholera.—The past year has been an exceedingly unfavourable one in respect of cholera. In no year since 1869 has there been so large an aggregate mortality from this cause. The nearest approach to it is 1876, in which 1,851 deaths were registered. The mean of the 12 years 1870 to 1881 was 1,314. On scanning the figures of this series, as shewn in table No. XII, an alternate ebb and flow of the disease is observable, and the large total of 1882 is the climax of a somewhat sudden ascent from 1880, in which a minimum occurred by a more gradual fall from 1876. The maximum of that year was gained by an ascent from 1871, which shows the lowest cholera mortality on record in Calcutta. But although the cholera aggregate of 1882 was unprecedented in recent years, it only amounts to about a half of what seems in former times to have been the habitual mortality from cholera in Calcutta. Dr Macpherson, in his work on cholera in its home, gives the aggregate statistics of cholera for 26 years, ending 1860. The mean of the series is 4,011 annual deaths. Table No. XII shows the mean of the five years, 1865-69, to be 4,388. Taking 4,000 to represent the annual cholera mortality of Calcutta prior to 1870, a saving of 34,000 lives may be fairly credited to sanitary improvements, more particularly to the supply of pure water for drinking and cooking purposes to the town. The cholera mortality of the suburbs presents a rise of 25 per cent., against 33 per cent. for the town.

The figures for town and suburbs are contrasted in the following statement:—

YEAR.	TOWN.		SUBURBS.
	Cholera deaths.	Per 1,000 of population.	Cholera deaths.	Per 1,000 of population.
1877	1,418	3.2	1,908	7.5
1878	1,338	3	2,363	9.3
1879	1,187	2.7	1,870	7.4
1880	805	1.8	980	3.8
1881	1,033	3.2	1,879	7.4
Mean	1,288	2.9	1,600	7.1
1882	2,210	5.1	2,340	9.3

It will be observed that the figures rise and fall consentaneously, but that the excess in 1882 over the mean is not so marked in the suburbs as in the town. Either, therefore, there is deterioration in the town, or amelioration in the suburbs as far as conditions favouring cholera are concerned; perhaps both. I am inclined to think that the suburbs are improving, but in view of the fact that the town is encircled by the suburbs on every side, and that both general and cholera death-rates tend to rise and fall in common, the importance of improving the sanitary condition of the suburbs is a matter of vital interest to the town.

19. Cholera, according to race, sex, and age.—The incidence of cholera varies in each of these respects. Males died at the rate of 5.5 per 1,000, against 4.4 for females. The death-rate among Hindus was 6.2, Mahomedans 3.6, mixed races 2.6, non-Asiatics 2.1, and other classes .55. These figures accord with the results of previous years. Forty-six infants under one year died of cholera; 17 children in the second year, 55 in the third, 66 in the fourth, and 41 in the fifth. The number of fatal cases among infants is large, but it probably includes cases of so-called "cholera infantum," which is not specific.

20. Cholera according to season.—The following statement gives an instructive view of the monthly prevalence of cholera in the past and previous years:—

The two earlier periods represent times of habitually severe prevalence, the third a time of abated cholera prevalence. The table shows two seasons of higher prevalence—the hot weather and commencement of the cold—and two seasons of lower prevalence, the rains and cold weather. The period of abatement, 1870-71, presents a contrast with the earlier periods in relatively less cholera in the rains and more after their cessation. The spring cholera is not so severe, and shows a tendency to earlier decline. In 1882 the spring cholera is more protracted, the rains depression more pronounced, and the winter cholera higher, with a decided and very remarkable rise in December. This table should be read in comparison with table No. XII, which gives the actual numbers.

21. The seasonal variations exhibited in the foregoing paragraph must depend mainly, but probably not immediately, on meteorology. But in the absence of exact knowledge of the proximate cause of cholera, it is impossible to make any positive statement regarding the precise manner in which climatic changes, near and remote, affect the prevalence of the disease. It must suffice for the present to place the facts on record; and as the relation observed to exist between the weather and the prevalence of cholera was made the subject of remark in the quarterly reports, extracts from these will furnish all the information available for the year.

In the report for the first quarter of the year the following remarks were recorded:—

“Cholera deaths have been somewhat below the mean. The mortality has been higher than that of the three preceding years. In the report for the last quarter of 1881 it was shown that the autumnal outbreak of this disease was exceptionally virulent. January and February exhibit a decline from the very high figures of November and December, but the March total gives evidence of the usual Spring rise. This has been progressive since the close of the quarter. When the maximum will be attained will depend on the weather. Experience has taught that a prolongation of drought with heat or a succession of heavy showers mitigates or quenches a Spring cholera; while an infrequent succession of light showers with intermediate humid heat encourage and sustain it. Whether the experience of 1882 will confirm that of past years in this respect remain to be seen. An inspection of the weekly returns of cholera discloses a tendency to decrease until the middle of March, and a somewhat rapid rise subsequently. The heavy rain of 11th and 12th February was followed by a slight abatement, and the scanty showers of the 14th, 16th, and 24th were coincident with a rise.”

The second quarterly report was to this effect:—

“The number of deaths registered under the head of cholera is in excess of every year of the preceding decade, and amounts to more than double the mean of that period. In no year since 1869 has the second quarter of the year exhibited so large a tale of cholera fatalities. The normal seasonal rhythm is also departed from, inasmuch as the May total exceeds the April total, while the June total amounts to over three times the June mean.

“The excess is therefore more manifest in May and June than in April, the disease attaining its maximum later than usual and declining more slowly. On studying the prevalence of the disease, week by week, no very marked fluctuations are apparent. There was a tendency to fall during the first three weeks of April, the numbers being 75, 58, and 52, succeeded by a rapid rise in the last week of April and first of May, the numbers being 106 and 104. The three succeeding weeks show more moderate figures—73, 73, 79: the rain in the first half of the month seems to have caused an abatement. The rainless second half of the month is succeeded by a remarkable rise to 115 in the week ending 3rd June, and thenceforward the weekly numbers are 75, 55, 58, and 18. The disease seems to have yielded, but somewhat stubbornly, to the heavier showers of June. The influence of rain is not so well marked in these figures as in former years. Still the disease has undoubtedly obeyed the usual law of season.

In the third quarterly report it was noted that, while the numbers were somewhat high, the usual depression in the prevalence of the disease was well marked. The meteorology of the season was normal.

In the report for the fourth quarter the cholera statistics of the period were commented upon in the following terms:—

“The mortality caused by cholera has been conspicuously large. In no fourth quarter of the preceding decade has the cholera mortality been so large as in 1882. As shown in previous quarterly reports, the year has been a bad one throughout as regards cholera. The Spring cholera was unusually severe and protracted, and the subsidence, which occurs in the rains, did not reach an average level. Indications of a rise commenced in the third week of October, and the numbers gradually grew larger until the middle of December, since when a somewhat rapid abatement has taken place. The disease did not present any tendency to ascent until after the heavy fall of rain, to which reference has been made in paragraph 2; but with the cessation of the rains and change of the monsoon it made very decided progress. The October total, though in advance of the mean, is by no means excessive. November renders the same figure as the preceding year, in which the winter cholera was also severe. It is the December result which presents so startling a departure from the rule of previous years, and so greatly exceeds the decennial mean. This exceptional December rise is not only at variance with the rule of cholera in recent years, but is still more so with that of former times, when the disease habitually prevailed with greater severity. Dr. John Macpherson gives a table in his work on "Cholera in its Home," showing the aggregate monthly mortality caused by cholera during 26 years ending 1860. The mean numbers of October, November, and December are 238, 320, and 313, giving a quarterly aggregate of 871 deaths. The cholera mortality of December constitutes, therefore, a very well-marked abnormality; and the question arises whether this abnormality has been peculiar to Calcutta, or has been shared by the suburbs and the surrounding districts. I have endeavoured to collect evidence on this point, with the result that all the information which I have succeeded in obtaining points to a similar excess of cholera mortality having occurred in the districts surrounding Calcutta. This is clear from the following tabular statement, which underrates, rather than overrates, the December mortality:—

Cholera Deaths for the months of October, November, and December 1882.

* Returns not received.

The general accuracy of the return is confirmed by the notes on the health of districts which appear weekly in the Calcutta Gazette. The returns obtained from the suburbs give totals of 172, 210, and 529 for the months of October, November, and December, which, making allowances for population, bear the ratios of 328, 156, and 223 to the urban mortality taken as 100. The first indication of unusual cholera prevalence was the occurrence, towards the end of October, in some villages of the suburban section, Chitpore, of a very serious outbreak among the coolies employed in certain jute presses. Close upon 200 of these were attacked in a few days, and the great majority of them died very rapidly. At this time cholera did not prevail with any severity in either town or suburbs. Subsequently the disease became very general throughout both urban and suburban areas. The incidence of the disease in the town was sporadic. It was very rarely that a group of cases occurred in one house or locality, and when this happened a special enquiry was invariably made. In some cases very insanitary conditions were discovered in localities where several cases occurred. The disease was of a very virulent type, the proportion of deaths to cases being remarkably high.

The history of cholera, up to the close of March 1883, is contained in the following extract from the report of the first quarter of this year:—

"Cholera mortality has again been very severe in the quarter under report, the quarterly total being 120 above the decennial mean. This excess is mainly due to the magnitude of the January total, February and March exhibiting figures nearly level with the decennial average. The disease in fact, though abating in January, maintained a high position. The February figures were more normal, and a minimum of prevalence was reached in the second week of this month. Since then the rise habitual to the season has occurred, but the figures are not far beyond the average of recent years. The disease may be said to have resumed its usual dimensions after a conspicuous increase of bulk in December and January, for which, in the present state of our knowledge, it is impossible to assign a satisfactory reason. The incidence of the disease has been sporadic, and the northern and central sections have, as usual, suffered more than the southern."

22. Localization of cholera.—In the following table, No. XIII, the sectional death-rates from cholera are shown for the year and for the preceding decade. These figures compare instructively with the general death-rates for similar periods given in table No. V. Serial numbers are introduced into table No. XIII in place of these. It will be observed that the sections generally retain a similar position in the cholera scale to that assigned to them by the decennial figures. Waterloo Street, Puddopooker, and Shampooker have risen somewhat, and Burtollah and Hastings fallen. It will also be observed that there is a general correspondence between the general death-rate and the cholera death-rate. The most notable exceptions are Burra Bazar, Jorabagan, and Coomertolly, in which comparatively high cholera death-rates coincide with comparatively low general death-rates. Taltollah and Collingah, on the other hand, are high in the general scale, but moderately low in the scale of death-rate from cholera. What these variations are due to might admit of free speculation; but in the absence of anything like a solid groundwork for these I content myself with placing the facts on record. The two sections principally inhabited by Europeans occupy a favourable position in every respect.

23. In all cases in which the disease presented any tendency to grouping, special investigation was made; and every instance in which several cases had occurred in a house or village, or within circumscribed limits, glaring insanitary defects were discovered. A foul tank, obstructed drainage, fetid ditches and cess-pools, ill-kept byres, offensive latrines, and so forth. Numerous cases might be detailed in support of this statement; but the conclusion forced upon me by all that I have seen of cholera since I became Health Officer of Calcutta is, that the disease flourishes in places and among communities where cleanliness is neglected, and filth of kinds allowed to lodge and fester in various ways and under various circumstances. The results of my inspections have in each instance been communicated to the Chairman, and recommendations made according to the nature of the sanitary defects discovered. These recommendations have invariably received prompt attention.

24. Bowel-complaints.—Although cholera was in excess in 1882, deaths from dysentery and diarrhoea were below the average. Fatal fluxes, however, occur under such a variety of conditions, and in association with so many diseased conditions of the body, that any discussion of totals represented by the term "bowel-complaints" would be absolutely valueless. It will be observed from table VII that these diseases are less fatal in the rains, and more fatal in the cold weather months.

25. Fevers.—The year has been a very favourable one as regards fatal fevers. In no year of the preceding decade have so few deaths been registered under this head.

26. Enteric fever.—Special care has been taken to check the accuracy of this entry, with the result that the number of deaths returned under this head has fallen from 569 in 1882 to 175 in 1883. It is more than doubtful whether this figure is correct. Only six cases were registered among Asiatics, and four among mixed races. In the month of November, I addressed a circular to the principal medical practitioners of the town, requesting them to intimate to this office the fact of any case of enteric fever occurring in their practice, with a view to investigating the circumstances under which the disease was contracted. Up to the close of March only two reports were received. The result of enquiry was to reveal a neglected latrine in one case and faulty drains in another. It is quite certain that enteric fever is a rare disease in Calcutta. Cases are occasionally met with, but they are rare—much rarer than in the large cities of Europe and America. Enquiries instituted in the hospitals during the year support the statements recorded in my report for 1881, that the disease is very seldom met with in the large hospitals of Calcutta.

27. Small-pox.—Only 17 deaths were registered under this head in 1882—a smaller total than in any year of the preceding decade. A minimum of prevalence has now been reached following the severe epidemic of 1878-79. Calcutta has been visited periodically by epidemics of small-pox from time beyond record. In 1832-33 an epidemic raged which caused 3,227 deaths; in 1887-38 another which killed 1,773 persons; in 1843-44 another from which 3,176 died; in 1848-49-50 another which caused a mortality of 6,261; one in 1856-57-58 killing 3,478; one in 1863-64-65 slaying 5,656; a slight outbreak in 1870 with 151 deaths; another in 1874-75 with 900; and a severe epidemic in 1878-79, from which 2,267 died. The years intervening between these outbreaks show less than 100 deaths, but none of them is blank. Since the close of the year apprehensions have been entertained of a fresh epidemic movement in Calcutta, as will be gathered from the following extract from the report of the first quarter:—

“Considerable anxiety was felt during the quarter regarding small-pox. The disease reached a very low level in 1882, only two deaths having been registered in the last quarter of that year. During the month of January only two deaths were returned; but in the third week of February reports of cases and deaths began to reach the office with increasing frequency. The disease was known to have prevailed with severity in some up-country stations, and frequent reports of cases and deaths were being received from the suburbs. The disease, moreover, has a tendency to prevail in epidemic form in Calcutta every third, fourth, or fifth year; and the last epidemic having disappeared in 1879, it was felt another was due. On the 24th February a report was received from Assistant Surgeon Jogendro Nath Bhattacharjee, Deputy Superintendent of Vaccination, that the disease had broken out severely in a village (Khaláseetollah) at No. 8, Jaun Bazar Street, principally inhabited by native seamen, and in some neighbouring villages. I visited this locality and saw a considerable number of bad cases—as many as six in one house. I at once addressed the Deputy Commissioner of Police, urging the immediate removal of the affected to the small-pox hospital at Sealdah, and soliciting his aid in getting the village vaccinated. The Deputy Superintendent, with praiseworthy energy, vaccinated and re-vaccinated every man, woman, and child in these places: 359, 328, 142, and 131 persons were vaccinated on the 27th and 28th February and 1st and 3rd March. I at the same time, with the sanction of the Chairman, entertained five additional vaccinators, and inserted advertisements in the papers warning the public of the danger, and recommending vaccination of the unprotected, and re-vaccination of the doubtfully protected. A depôt for the propagation of animal lymph had fortunately been by this time established, and Dr. Gupta was good enough, at my request, to keep a succession of vaccinated calves available for emergencies. These have been found useful in vaccinating villages, and have been used also in the more crowded depôts. These measures have, I rejoice to say, been apparently successful for the disease has, since their adoption, abated, the figures for the weeks ending 3rd 10th, 17th, 24th, and 31st March being 12, 4, 8, 4, 2. The same system of removing the affected to the hospital, and vaccinating the house and neighbourhood, has been adopted in every other case of reported small-pox; but the instances of attack have been isolated, and no attempt at epidemic prevalence has become manifest, except that to which reference has been made. The assistance received from the police has been most valuable. The Assistant Surgeon Hari Das Mittra carried on the work with diligence and judgment on Baboo J. N. Bhattacharjee's transfer to another post. It is interesting to note that among 40 cases reported to this office, regarding which information of this kind was furnished, one had had a previous attack of small-pox, seven had undergone inoculations, six had been vaccinated, in four cases protection was doubtful, and 22 were unprotected.”

28. Other causes.—These, as will be gathered from a reference to table No. IV, are again in excess. There was no epidemic of any consequence during the year, except whooping cough, from which 28 deaths were registered, against an average of about 20. Deaths from croup were also rather more numerous than usual. The mortality from measles fell from 114 to 12. Diphtheria gave 10 deaths, which is about the usual number. The mortality from phthisis was high—482 deaths, against about 350. Tetanus and convulsions were more fatal than usual, as also inflammatory chest complaints of all kinds. Twenty-seven deaths from diabetes were registered, against an average of 23. Fewer still-births were returned, and more deaths from old age. Suicides were also fewer in number, and the total under the head of “not specified,” though higher than in 1881, is below the average. Deaths from syphilis were more numerous than in recent years.

29. Vaccination.—The number of vaccinations performed during the year 1882 was 7,802, against 6,538 in 1881. Of these 7,273 were primary vaccinations, and 529 re-vaccinations, against 5,523 and 1,015 in the preceding year. These figures indicate a marked improvement, due to greater diligence on the part of the staff, and also to the aid derived from the returns of unvaccinated children obtained from the Registrars, under section 23 of Act V of 1880 (B.C.) Substantial progress has been made in carrying out the provisions of the law; but difficulties are still encountered, and many children escape vaccination owing to the long period allowed by the Act. The increased number of vaccinations performed in 1882 during the hot weather and rains is specially noteworthy. I have inspected the vesicle weekly, and invariably found it satisfactory. Full details of vaccination, section by section, and month by month, are given in table No XIV.

30. Since the close of the year, under pressure of an impending epidemic of small-pox, vaccination has been pushed with greater activity, as the following extract from the report for the first quarter shews:—

"Six thousand and sixty-three persons were vaccinated, and 2,246 re-vaccinated during the quarter, against 4,263 and 475 in the first quarter of 1882. This great augmentation has been due to the greater anxiety of the public and more active exertions of the department in view of the probability of an epidemic outbreak of small-pox. Animal vaccination has now been established in Calcutta, and though the vesicle does not seem to be quite so strong as that already in use, the public possess, through the liberality of Government, the option of obtaining vaccine from the calf, which many persons prefer."

31. Tables Nos. XV and XVI give further information regarding vaccination. The proportion of females primarily vaccinated is higher, but that of infants lower. The ratio of success in primary vaccination continues to be good.

One hundred and thirteen prosecutions were instituted for refusal to comply with the provisions of the law. In 100 of these vaccination was performed under order of the Magistrate; in two cases fines of Rs. 5 were imposed. In eight instances vaccination was postponed: one child died, and two absconded while the proceedings were going on. In no case has prosecution been resorted to until after persuasion has been tried without success.

32. Nuisance Department.—On the 1st of June the Night-soil Department was transferred from the control of the Engineer to that of this office. The establishment was strengthened and reorganized in order to subserve other purposes connected with the health of the town besides the disposal of night-

soil. The staff sanctioned by the Commissioners is shewn on the margin. Mr. Gilbert Wright, who had previously held the office of Personal Assistant to the Health Officer, was appointed Inspector of the Nuisance Department, and he has abundantly justified his selection by the great zeal and intelligence, and the indefatigable industry with which he has carried on the work. The following return indicates the work done by this department as far as privies are concerned:—

In sanctioning new privies, great attention has been paid to their drainage and to the removal of the foul liquid which was wont to stagnate in their neighbourhood. Wherever it was possible to convey this into the sewers, cemented drains have been insisted on, and when this was impossible, receptacles have been provided to retain the fluid, and a staff of 100 additional mehters has been sanctioned by the Commissioners to empty and clean these. In addition to the special work by the department, it has been utilized for purposes of general conservancy, investigating disease, inspecting markets and drug shops, &c. Prosecutions have also been instituted for violations of the sanitary clauses of the Municipal Act as displayed in the following statement:—

Statement shows the Notices and Summons issued and disposed of under different Sections of the Act during the year 1882 (for the first five months being under the Engineer, and last seven months under the Health Officer).

* Action taken by the Engineer's Department.

33. The sanitary condition of Calcutta.—Measures having for their object the improvement of the sanitary state of the town have been pushed on with vigour. New roads have been made, foul drains have been piped and converted into clean pathways, new areas have been provided with sewers, and the houses connected with these for the removal of house and bath-washings, which previously stagnated and stank. Streets have been widened, and facilities provided for the removal of refuse; tanks, and wells containing water which has truly been described as diluted sewage, have been filled up, and substantial progress made in the reclamation of some of the worst bustees of the town. The details of these operations will be found in the Engineer's report.

34. But although great sanitary improvements have been accomplished in Calcutta, and, year by year, palpable progress is being made in the direction of reform, there still remains much to be done ere the sanitary condition of the town can be pronounced in any sense satisfactory. This undoubted fact has found loud expression in the shape of a public agitation which took place at the commencement of the cold weather of 1881-82, and was repeated with renewed vigour at the beginning of the cold season of 1882-83. On each occasion the municipality has responded by appointing a carefully selected committee for the purpose of enquiry and deliberation. The outcome of these proceedings has been—

1st—The organization of a nuisance department.

2nd—The organization of an establishment for bustee conservancy.

3rd—The assignation of more money for bustee improvement and general conservancy.

4th—Change of method in dealing with rubbish in certain parts of the town. The material, in place of being cast on the footpaths and roadways, is now retained in bins and baskets, and removed from the interior of compounds by carts.

5th—Accelerated effort to increase the water-supply of the town.

6th—Careful study of the sewer system, and consideration of measures necessary for its improvement.

35. The following extract from my report for the first quarter of 1882 describes concisely the principal sanitary defects of Calcutta. It is hoped that the new energy displayed by the newly elected Corporation in the direction of sanitary reform will make a decided impression on the sources and causes of uncleanness which this passage represents:—

“The sanitary condition of the town has been under keen criticism during the past quarter. Although the general health and mortality of the city have been, as compared with past years, not unfavourable, and there has existed a remarkable exemption from epidemic disease, the occurrence of a few cases of typhoid fever among residents belonging to the upper class of Europeans excited something akin to a panic, and loud and repeated complaints were made in the papers regarding the conservancy and sanitation of the town. This outcry has led to a thorough enquiry by a special Committee of the Commissioners regarding the system of drainage and conservancy at present in existence, its adequacy, and the probable influence on the health of the town, of defective arrangements or faulty execution. I have adduced evidence in my annual report to show that typhoid fever is not a common disease in Calcutta. The existing system of underground sewers has been carefully examined and reported on by competent sanitary authorities as regards construction and ventilation. Two important measures have been indicated as necessary for the safety of the town in connection with these, namely, more flushing and better street ventilation. Active steps are being taken in the Engineer's Department to secure these objects. It has been realized that the arrangements for the removal of filth from roads, drains, and more especially from bustees, are imperfect. There can be no question that an enormous mass of filth of the worst kind—organic matter in process of putrefaction—lodges perennially in Calcutta. The removal of this is simply a matter of contrivance and expense. That worst of all kinds of filth—human excrement—is carried away partly by the mechanical agency of water through the sewers, and partly by the agency of human beings—the mehters. The former service is undoubtedly the best as regards thoroughness, promptitude, and safety. The work done by the latter—the human agency—is very far from perfect. The removal is not complete, and part of the dangerous material finds its way into drains, into tanks, and on to the surface, there to undergo dangerous decomposition. But there are other kinds of filth—house refuse, rotting vegetable matter, remnants of food, stable and horse dung and litter, and the refuse of sundry trades, which are removed very imperfectly and rarely, or not at all, and are permitted to flow into tanks, to fester in stagnant drains, or soak into an alluvial soil. Filth of this kind is to be met with all over the town.

The two principal receptacles of this kind of filth are the tanks and ditches which stud and fret the surface of the town. Nothing short of the radical and complete obliteration of these fœtid pits and troughs will suffice to remove what constitutes a palpable and indisputable danger to the public health. The progress of road-making, sewer construction, and tank filling is gradually reducing the number of these horrid sloughs; but it seems desirable to urge once again, as I have repeatedly done in previous reports, periodical and special, that the sanitary state of Calcutta cannot be pronounced in any sense satisfactory until the tanks and drains which receive and store so large a share of the filth of the town have been obliterated or remodelled and conserved. The diurnal removal of filth from privies and roads, even if it were more satisfactorily and thoroughly accomplished than it is, still leaves behind, as long as these tanks and drains exist, an immense mass of uncleanness permanently, to offend the senses and endanger health.

36. Water-supply.—The tabular statements appended to this report containing the results of periodical and systematic analyses by Mr. A. Pedler shew that the water supplied to the town continues to be of excellent quality. The question of increasing the supply—a measure which is urgently desirable—has been under earnest discussion during the year. Three alternative proposals engaged the attention of the Commissioners—namely (1) conveyance by an open cut with subsequent filtration; (2) conveyance after filtration by a brick conduit; and (3) conveyance after filtration by an iron main, as at present. It has been decided, I rejoice to write, to adopt the last of these measures, and it may be expected that at no distant date the supply of water, of similar purity to the present, will be doubled.

37. The appendix furnishes information regarding confiscations, the number of complaints and applications disposed of, and other matters of office routine. I have much pleasure in recording my sense of the valuable assistance rendered to me by my Personal Assistant Mr. Gilbert Wright, and my head clerk Baboo Indro Mohun Chatterjee.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient servant,

K. McLEOD, A.M., M.D., F.R.C.S.E., Surgeon-Major, Health Officer of Calcutta.
